

Prof. Dra. María Piedad Ruiz Torres. She received her doctorate from the University of Alcalá (UAH) in 1995, she is currently a Professor in the Department of Systems Biology of the UAH, in the Physiology unit. She is coordinator of the UAH research group, called "Translational research in chronic diseases associated with aging and kidney disease." She is principal investigator of the Renal and Vascular Physiopathology Research Group of Area 5 of IRyCIS and belongs to RICORS 2040 (Kidney Disease) of the Carlos III Health Institute. Her research career has been linked to the study of the mechanisms underlying renal, vascular and muscular aging. As well as the mechanisms of progression of chronic kidney disease and its associated pathologies. She is the author of more than 60 articles and principal investigator of 11 research projects, some of them related to private companies. She has directed 6 doctoral theses, and is currently directing another 4.